Experts in charge of the experiment predict a great future for this type of motor. The engine used was found too small for the weight it had to pull, but an average speed of 20 miles an hour was maintained, which was regarded as creditable. The "semilibesel" type of motor, its friends say, not only costs less for upkeep but is simpler and therefore cheaper to make than the standard type. Experiments are being conducted with the idea of using this new engine on the automobile busses of Paris.
